Scott Hamilton Skates Onto My Gym Board

> After enrolling his 16-month-old son, Aiden, in classes at My Gym, Olympic ice skater Scott Hamilton has become a believer in the organization—he's now an honorary board member of My Gym Enterprises' Challenged America Foundation. The foundation is raising funds to develop and roll out a nationwide mobile My Gym program designed to bring fitness and health to children in physical, mental, and financial need.

"We think the program should be available to everyone," says Hamilton. "We believe in it. We think it's terrific for Aiden and, if you put your own child in it, there's no better endorsement."

My Gym, based in Sherman Oaks, California, offers physical early learning/pre-gymnastics classes and other health and fitness programs for parents and children age three months to 13. The company has 140 locations in 30 states and Asia. ■
